About me

As a web developer, I specialize in building scalable and user-friendly applications that balance performance, design, and functionality. Through collaborative team projects and professional development, I have honed my ability to write clean, maintainable code and work efficiently with modern frameworks and tools.

My experience in both web development and teaching has strengthened my communication and problem-solving skills, allowing me to share knowledge effectively, adapt to new challenges, and contribute meaningfully to team environments. Whether developing interactive web solutions or working alongside others to refine ideas, I thrive in dynamic settings where learning and collaboration drive innovation.
